Didsbury mayor eyes return Wittal wants top spot

BY JOSH SKAPIN
Didsbury Review

This year's Didsbury municipal election will include a race for mayor.

While the nomination date is Sept. 17 and other interested candidates are not yet known, at least two people will be campaigning for the lead position this month.

Incumbent Mayor Dorothy Moore has announced that she will be running for a second term, and deputy mayor Brian Wittal has confirmed his intention to be the next Didsbury mayor.

"I do plan to run for mayor one more time, and ask residents for their continued support and involvement," said Moore.

Moore said her decision was a matter of continuing what was started over her three year term.

"Government and planning consultation, even at the municipal level, takes longer than one would imagine it would," she said,

"The foundation for quality community growth is in place now, but implementation of all of the fiscal and physical and community planning requires more time."

Moore cites the work done in land annexation as a highlight from her term.

Wittal says his interest in the new role comes from encouragement by community members.

"My reason to run for mayor is from getting nothing but support from individuals in town, residents, business people, and even those out of town to run for the position of mayor," said Wittal.

"With the growth and the new opportunities that we have in Didsbury, they feel it's time for new ideas, a new face, and a new leader to take the town forward as we go into this period of growth that we have before us."

Wittal said his time served as deputy mayor was a valuable experience.

"It got me more involved with the mayor in regards to some of the day-to-day things that happen...the meetings that go on, and the discussions that you have with residents and some of the other responsibilities that you have with that role acting on the mayor's behalf when she's not available," he said.

"It helped me get a better idea, of the broader aspect of what the role of mayor is."

All candidates will be formally announced following the nomination deadline Sept. 17.

An all-candidates meeting will be hosted by the Didsbury and District Chamber of Commerce at the Didsbury Memorial Complex Oct. 3 at 7 p.m.

Didsbury residents will go to the polls Oct. 15.

Can't because he's Catholic School trustee continues Human Rights fight

BY JOSH SKAPIN
Didsbury Review

For the first time in nine years, Roy Brassard will not serve as a trustee with Chinook's Edge School Division – and it's because he's Catholic.

The Red Deer Catholic School system branched out into Sylvan Lake, Innisfail, Olds, and Didsbury in 2006 and because of the province's School Act, Brassard, a practicing Roman Catholic became a resident of the Catholic School Division.

"I could have ten kids go to a (Chinook's Edge) school. I could be a teacher or a principal, but I can't be a trustee," said Brassard.

Because of this, Brassard or anyone in his position will not be able to participate in the school trustee portion of the upcoming municipal election.

Brassard said when the Catholic School Board's 2006 expansion took place, he was close to losing his status as trustee.

"I'm sitting there illegitimately, so to speak," he said. "...That's the same as someone from Edmonton sitting on a Calgary School Board."

Brassard says he was informed by the provincial government that he would be allowed to serve the remainder of his term.

Brassard, supported by the Chinook's Edge School board has since registered a complaint with the Human Rights Commission.

"A reason we went to the Human Rights Commission was, someone could come along and challenge a decision made by the board because I participated in the vote," said Brassard.

"Let's just say, particularly if the vote was very close, they could say 'well Brassard shouldn't have participated in that vote because he is not supposed to be on that board, I not only want that motion thrown out, I want all the motions he participated in thrown out.'"

Chinook's Edge Superintendent Jim Gibbons says the school board supports Brassard's bid to the Human Rights Commission, because he didn't do anything wrong.

"He didn't do anything to lose his job, his position, or his interest in leading the school division to help the kids learn," said Gibbons.

Gibbons says the human rights complaint will go through three stages before eventually getting to a human rights hearing, adding that the school board's legal advisors have told him that such hearings can take more than two years to be scheduled, and the complaint was initially issued approximately 18 months ago.

"I think our board's position is anyone living in the geographic area that is the age to become an elected official should be able to run for public school board," said Gibbons.

"That tends to be what public means. You're welcome, no matter your race, colour, creed or religion."

Gibbons says the school board would have taken the complaint forward on its own, but the human rights legislation only allows the individual who has agreed to take a complaint forward.

"The board certainly pushed this to go forward, knowing that this is a position any trustee in our school division or throughout the province, could face," he said.

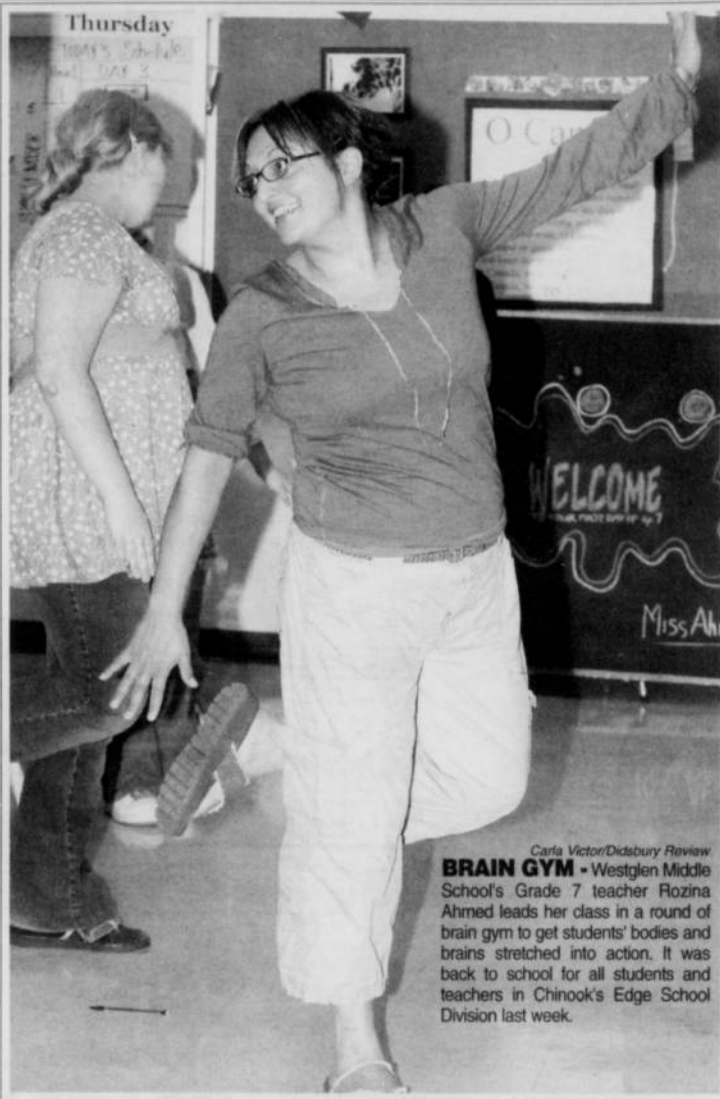

"I think our board sees this as bigger than just one individual."

Chinook's Edge is also pursuing change through the Alberta School Board Association, making a motion for it to adopt a policy that would allow any member of the geographic area that is over 18 years of age to become a public school trustee, at the Annual General Meeting.

The motion was defeated. Gibbons believes the board did not vote in favour of his motion because the item was a late addition to the agenda.

Brassard is undecided on whether or not he would run for another term if he was able.

Because the case is presently being reviewed by the Human Rights Commission, MLA Richard Marz declined comment.

Sgt. discusses staff shortages, false alarms with council

BY JOSH SKAPIN
Didsbury Review

Under half the complaints Didsbury RCMP received over the last three months were from Didsbury.

This, and other details listed in Sgt. Kevin O'Dwyer's quarterly report were discussed at the Didsbury Town Council meeting Sept. 4.

Since the start of June, Didsbury RCMP has received 499 complaints, 26 of them unfounded.

Didsbury RCMP not only serves the town of Didsbury, but Carstairs, Cremona and Water Valley as well.

O'Dwyer spoke about the challenges of being short-staffed, saying his detachment has received approximately twelve and a half complaints a day.

"Our members are going like mad," said O'Dwyer.

"We're lucky to have two members a shift and those members are going constantly."

O'Dwyer says the type of workload has made it difficult for the detachment to begin some of its programs, like bike patrol.

"We've only had a chance to have a few bike patrols throughout the season."

The process for bringing in a new member takes over two years, said O'Dwyer.

"It all comes down to dollars and cents, policing is not cheap," he said. "I look at my resources and where I have to put people. There are some things that I just physically cannot do."

As an example of their staff shortage, O'Dwyer said at this year's Didsbury Elks parade Cst. Robert Newton and Cst. Kent Shaw finished night shift and slept for a few hours before donning their traditional red uniforms and marching in the annual event.

From his report, O'Dwyer mentioned concern for responding to 30 false alarms over the past three months.

"We're travelling lights and sirens. We are placing people at risk," said O'Dwyer, referring to patrol vehicles travelling at a high rate of speed to the scene of the alarm.

"We're travelling lights and sirens. We are placing people at risk,"

SGT. KEVIN O'DWYER

O'Dwyer suggested a bylaw where business owners with faulty alarm systems would be fined, adding that the Town of Olds has a bylaw covering false alarms.

"With (Didsbury) growing at a rapid rate, it may be a good idea," said O'Dwyer.

Councillor Gayle Veno mentioned she has heard some Didsbury residents complain about car-hopping. Veno explained this meant, individuals jumping from one parked car roof to another, causing damage to the vehicle.

O'Dwyer said such incidents have not been reported and he encourages people who had trouble with car-hopping and any other concerns to speak with the detachment.

Town Manager Roy Brown said the last time council met with O'Dwyer there were concerns over vandalism, and asked if there has since been any change.

According to his report, there were 29 reported cases of vandalism over the past three months.

"I look at that 29 complaints of vandalism - but then again we didn't hear about car-hopping. Are they going down or are they going up? The only way we can track this is if we know about them," said O'Dwyer.

Council advised O'Dwyer that they found his report useful and would like to see it continue on a quarterly basis.

Other notable statistics from the report include 12 complaints of theft under $5,000, 16 complaints of disturbing the peace, 43 traffic offences, 22 traffic accidents, and seven reports of impaired operation of a motor vehicle.

Didsbury makes right choices in decal debate

BY JOSH SKAPIN
Didsbury Review

When Didsbury town council was approached with the idea of adding small decals to town vehicles with the message "support our troops," it didn't take an argument or debate to decide what the right decision was.

Unlike the City of Calgary's choice, which has placed Mayor Dave Bronconnier under fire, Didsbury opted for the modest but meaningful display of support.

The key is its meaning. It's not, support our war, or hail George W. Bush.

Political opinions aside, this is support for the men and women who are sacrificing literally everything.

It's courageous – but let's not fool ourselves, probably scared human beings going to some of the most dangerous areas in the world not knowing if they will ever see their friends and family again.

Think about that for a second. Take a moment to think what would be going through your mind as you leave Canada and travel to the unknown. Not just the unknown, but to a place where other people are trying to kill you.

That's not just another day at the office. Our jobs can seem pretty bad some days, but few of us can say we have been through the type of workday that Canada's military constantly endure.

I can't imagine what it would be like to drift off to sleep and not know if your eyes will open again.

While decals can't offer physical protection, there is something to be said for feeling like you have people behind you.

When you're wearing the Canadian flag on your uniform and going through nightmarish circumstances, I would imagine being aware of support from your country's people brings a soldier a sense of purpose and validation.

Obviously to a lesser level of importance, it reminds me of when Calgary streets fill with cars sporting red Calgary Flames flags during playoff times. As a city, Calgary rallied behind its team. As a country, this is a way to rally around our team.

When town vehicles pass me, even if it's the peace officer having words with me for an ill-advised U-turn, I'll feel a sense of patriotism seeing the town of Didsbury emblem next to a message that makes me proud to be Canadian.

As they come nose-to-nose with hell in war-torn Afghanistan or unimaginable encounters in the depths of Darfur, a tiny sticker on a vehicle bumper is small but necessary thanks.

Commentary Putting their money where their mouth is

They say the only certainties in life are death and taxes.

In truth, there are a few more: road construction will happen every summer, Americans will never embrace soccer, and school boards will always complain they never get enough money from the provincial government.

The latter has been particularly true since 1994 when the Alberta government took away from school boards the right to levy property taxes. Previously, each school board decided their property tax rate and had to be accountable to their taxpayers for how much was taxed and how it was spent. Since the 1994 neutering, school boards have relied solely on the provincial government for funding.

This lack of a direct financial link to taxpayers has resulted in most taxpayers barely feeling the need to hold school boards accountable for the money they spend. Most taxpayers know school boards now only fulfil an administrative function, much like the civil servants who run Alberta's Child and Family Service Authorities, our court system or the Land Titles office.

Moreover, this lack of accountability has turned school board trustees into taxpayer-funded lobbyists, lobbying for more taxpayer funding. And lobby they do. Hardly a month goes by without hearing one school board trustee or another publicly complain to the province about the "urgent need" for more tax dollars.

This is even more apparent during school board trustee elections. Many candidates run solely on the platform they would be a louder and better lobbyist for more of your money than their opponent.

Voters are turned-off by this. In fact, two recent by-elections to fill trustee vacancies on the Elk Island Public School Board resulted in voter turnouts of 3.6 per cent and 1.7 per cent respectively.

Yet that may change as a result of Grande Yellowhead Regional Division and Grande Prairie Public School District both enacting a rarely used provision of the School Act allowing them to ask taxpayers directly for more money through a plebiscite this October.

The Act allows for school boards to ask their residents for up to an additional 3 per cent of their operating budget for each of the next three years. It is estimated to cost a typical homeowner an extra $214 in Jasper and $104 in Grande Prairie each year.

These plebiscites create true accountability and, importantly, give taxpayers a say. Either yes – I think you have made a good case and I'm willing to give you my hard earned money, or no – I think being the highest funded school system in Canada is good enough.

A yes vote will not only give the board the dollars they seek, but also a mandate to their trustees to continue lobbying for more from the province.

A no vote will make the board live within its current means, but also tell these trustees their lobbying of the government for more tax dollars must stop.

Regardless, these plebiscites demonstrate the trustees in Grande Prairie and Grande Yellowhead are serious about their belief their school board needs more tax dollars. In fact, they are the only boards and the only trustees who have the conviction to back their complaints up with action.

As for the 60 other Alberta school boards who continue to complain, yet refuse to ask taxpayers directly for more money – your actions (or lack thereof) speak much louder than your words.

Ponderings of the heart Names Are Important

MARGARET FRADLEY

How important are our names? When we go into the bank, the grocery store, or any other shop, and they call us by name, does that not seem special to us?

There is a somewhat humorous story told relating to a small child who returned home from Sunday School, and was asked by his mother what he had learned. "Oh," replied the youngster, "we learned a new prayer today." His mother then asked if he could remember what it was. "Oh yes," replied the child, "it was, 'Father in New Haven, how do you know my name?'"

This little anecdote may cause us to smile at the child's reply, but it does convey a good, meaningful, and important truth. We, too, have a Father, who knows, loves, cares about, and calls each one of us by name.

Some time ago, when taking a church service and giving the children's story, I asked the children how they would feel if their teacher asked them, "now you in the green shirt, can you give me the answer?" And one very alert little boy immediately said, "no, I wouldn't like that; I do have a name."

Yes, we all have a name, and how special it is, and how special we should feel when we are 'called by name' by the One who loves us, and knows our every thought and the intentions of our hearts.

Community-minded people, like you, can help us build strong children, families and communities!

Alberta Children's Services, Region 4 – Alberta Children's Services is accepting applications for the ministerial appointment of board members to the Central Alberta Child and Family Services Authority. We are seeking community-minded people with a sincere interest in the well-being of children, youth and families, who want to support others to reach their fullest potential.

This community board acts in a governance role and works together to set objectives and strategic directions for the programs and services for children, youth and families. Board members also facilitate community engagements within their region. Board member's skills focus on governance, financial planning, policy development and community involvement.

Council briefs Sept.4

BY JOSH SKAPIN
Didsbury Review

Didsbury supports troops

Decals displaying the message "Support our Troops" will be placed on Town of Didsbury vehicles after a motion was passed by Didsbury town council in favour of the proposal.

The magnetic decals were donated by candidate for the Conservative leadership in the Wild Rose constituency Blake Richards.

"Placing a yellow ribbon on your vehicle is such a small gesture, but I'm sure it means so much to the family members of those soldiers serving overseas to know they are supported," said Richards.

Richards says because the decals have a magnetic back, they won't do damage to the vehicles when they are removed at a later date.

Football, golf get legacy fund

Council decided on how to use the $3,769.82 left in the Seniors' Games Legacy Reserve account. The Didsbury Golf Club will receive 70 per cent of the funds and the new Didsbury youth football club will receive 30 per cent of the remaining funds.

Council discussed the clubs splitting the funds.

"I think the 50-50 ratio is not realistic," said councillor Ernie Ryckman. "When you look at the length of time the golf club has been here and compare it to what is considered a new sport to town."

Advertising was distributed to local groups inviting them to apply.

Peace Officer policies reviewed

Council reviewed code of conduct policies under the new Community Peace Officer Program from the Solicitor General. The policies include the handling of public complaints and discipline of the peace officer.

Council approved the code of conduct, but made amendments to the handling of public complaints that will be seen for approval at the next council meeting Sept. 18.

One of the proposed amendments was by councillor Bob Davidson, who recommended a clause protecting the confidentiality of the complainant.

Group to backup Brown

Council discussed a method of replacing town manager Roy Brown in case he is away or unable to fulfill his responsibilities for a period of time.

This became an issue after the resignation of assistant Chief Administrative Officer (CAO) Brenda Hemming.

Brown proposed that if he is absent for four or more days then Director of Planning and Development Robert Wigg, Chief Financial Officer Sam Smalldon, and Municipal Clerk Luana Smith fill the position on a rotating basis. If Brown is absent for less than four days, his proposal states that he feels that business can carry on with the use of internet and phone.

"I would rather see you look at the calibre of skills and qualifications of an individual and decide who may back up the CAO," said councillor Stan Neufeld, adding that all listed candidates may qualify. "I would like to see you decide on one person to back up the CAO, which would give them some grooming and experience in the position."

Brown said the naming of a replacement would be for making the final decision on an issue and that in his absence the potential replacements would be asked to work as a team in fulfilling the duties of CAO.

"It brings advantages to (the replacements), allowing them to do their own job as well," said Brown.

Council decided in favour of Brown's proposal for his planned two week absence in September. The matter will be reassessed in October.

First reading for IDP

Council granted first reading to the town and Mountain View County's Inter-municipal development plan template. A joint public hearing will be held at the Mountain View County office Oct. 1 at 2:30 p.m. Council expects to see the proposal for second and third reading at the council meeting Oct. 2.

Stick curling grows in Didsbury

Season starts for another year

BY JOSH SKAPIN
Didsbury Review

One of the province's hot spots for the sport is looking forward to the startup of another season.

Registration for stick curling in Didsbury, including three leagues Tuesday morning, Thursday morning, and Thursday afternoon is slated for Sept. 25.

With the growth of the game, the Alberta Stick Curling Championships will include four openings in each of the eight zones in the province.

For those with more than four teams looking to vie for the title, a zone play-down will be played to see who will advance.

"Oh, we'll have at least four in our zone," chuckled Didsbury stick curling representative Garry Sherman, of the popularity of stick curling in the Mountain View County area.

Didsbury stick curling had 96 members last year and is eyeing a similar or greater turnout this year.

Also on Didsbury stick curling's radar screen is the expansion of wheelchair curlers to their league.

"There have been some preliminary effort to integrate stick curling and wheelchair curling so that both groups are playing the same game, and competing in the same competitions," said

Sherman.

"That's been a goal of ours right from way back."

Presently no wheelchair curlers are competing in Didsbury at this time.

Prior to the start of the season, Didsbury stick curling will be holding a free introductory clinic for inexperienced players.

Depending on the skill level of the participants, the clinic will work on everything from learning fundamentals to polishing basic skills.

Freeman says rookies are typically surprised how easy stick curling is for anyone to play.

"Just about anybody can do it. All age group and both genders," he said.

"We've got all kinds of participants with all kinds of medical problems that still manage."

Sherman says Didsbury stick curling is now looking at growing their skins league, a division that had 10 members last year.

He describes the sport as being stick curling rules with a slide curling delivery. Stick curling was introduced to the Didsbury Curling Club in 2000, first being referred to as "push broom."

Several members have been involved in the sport since its Didsbury inception, including Carson Schultz who Sherman credits as a driving force for its growth in town.

DIDSBURY MUSEUM EARNS RECOGNIZED MUSEUM STATUS GRANTED DESIGNATION WITHIN FIRST YEAR OF MUSEUM AFFIRMATION PROGRAM.

The Didsbury Museum is one of the latest museums in the province to receive the Recognized Museum designation from the Alberta Museum Association. The museum earned this designation after participating in the Museum Affirmation Program, a new initiative designed to strengthen the Association's accountability toward the public funds it distributes through grants and programming to the province's museums.

"The Alberta Museums Association is pleased to present the Recognized Museum standing to the Didsbury Museum. The Didsbury Museum worked very hard to reach this goal. They showed dedication in taking part in a program which will undoubtedly raise the standards for Alberta museums," said Executive Director, Gerry Osmond.

The Didsbury Museum, has been provided with the Recognized Museum logo to display at their museum. To earn this designation, the museum provided a panel of museum professionals with evidence demonstrating how they are meeting the internationally recognized definition of a museum.

Didsbury teens recovered after runaway scare

BY JOSH SKAPIN
Didsbury Review

After a request for public assistance from area media outlets, police located two girls who ran away from a group home in Didsbury.

One of the girls was located Sept. 1 and the other was located Sept. 2, both by police in Calgary. Didsbury RCMP first heard about the 13-year-old, and 17-year-old girls running away Aug. 29, but did not notify the media until Aug. 30. Sgt. Kevin O'Dwyer said the girls were habitual runaways, which are normally found quite quickly.

The next day a personal item identified as belonging to one of the girls was located along the train tracks.

"At that point we pull out all the stops and know we need to find them right away," said O'Dwyer.

That's when the RCMP used television and radio stations to supply a basic description of the missing girls.

While police did not release photographs and names, O'Dwyer says the RCMP received several tips from the public.

The RCMP also requested assistance from Canadian Pacific Railway police and the STARS helicopter, which scanned the railway tracks between Didsbury and Calgary.

O'Dwyer said the RCMP had information that led them to believe Calgary was where the runaways were headed.

Both girls were found unharmed. Police would not release details on how the girls ended up in Calgary.

Committee calls Didsbury council underpaid

Mayor doubles dollars next term

BY JOSH SKAPIN
Didsbury Review

Following the upcoming municipal election, the Didsbury Mayor and Didsbury Town Council will receive a pay hike.

The mayor for the next term will earn more than double of what the previous mayor earned, making $1,200 a month, up from $503. The deputy mayor and each member of council will earn $600 a month, and $500 a month respectively.

This remuneration was approved at the council meeting Sept. 4.

A recommendation for the raises came from a committee of community members, which included Brian Forestall, Cheryl Dahl, and Millie Lennox.

"We concluded that Didsbury was about a third of what communities of similar size - and not facing the growth problems that we are having or the amount of time being spent," said Forestall.

The committee compared the paycheques Didsbury elected officials were earning to their counterparts in municipalities smaller, the same size and larger in population, which included Bonneville, the municipal district of Crownsnest Pass, Stettler, and Barrhead.

Carstairs was also used in the consideration because of its proximity to Didsbury. According to the committee remuneration details for Olds and Sundre were unavailable.

Forestall says he was surprised at the difference in compensation they found between Didsbury elected officials and those in the towns they compared.

"It became apparent that (Didsbury's elected official compensation) was so significantly lower than - an increase could have been justified just because of the pressures of our town and that amount of work that council members seem to be putting in."

The committee said in its proposal that they feel it's important to encourage residents with professional, educational and business backgrounds to run for office.

"Compensation needs to be such that hours away from an employer or business do not pose a financial restriction or hardship," said the recommendation.

The new pay structure also granted councillors .45/km in mileage compensation, $30 an hour for council meetings, and meals and associated expenses be compensated with appropriate receipts and mileage.

Wiser from experience says council Neufeld won't be back

BY JOSH SKAPIN
Didsbury Review

All but one member of Didsbury town council will be looking to return for another term following the upcoming municipal election Oct. 15.

Councillor Stan Neufeld has announced his retirement, and councillors Gayle Veno, Bob Davidson, and Ernie Ryckman are preparing their campaigns for re-election.

Neufeld called the three year term a good experience, but due to personal reasons has decided not to run again.

"I really didn't know when I ran the first time whether or not I would do it again," said Neufeld.

"...Sometimes it takes quite a bit more time than I really expected, so I am just going to take some more time for some recreation and some other things that I want to do."

"I found it an enjoyable experience and I worked with a tremendous team of people. We had a very good council, an excellent mayor, so the relationships were very positive."

The council members that are eyeing a return all agree that it is important to continue what they started.

"I think the concern that I have shared by those running again is that it was really difficult for six people to arrive on council at the same time," said Ryckman, of the last election that named six residents as new council members.

"There's a pretty steep learning curve."

Ryckman believes council got to a functional level at "about six months."

"I think we all want to go back so another council doesn't have to go through that," said Ryckman.

"It's easier if three of us run and get re-elected, so we can help the others a great deal."

Davidson agrees, saying it will be important to follow up with the endeavors the present council started.

"There are some things that we are working on," he said.

"There's an awful lot to learn and it seems a shame not to put it to use for a while."

Veno says being on council, means there is plenty to learn.

While she did serve on town council for back-to-back terms starting in 1992, with Didsbury's current growth spurt, the position requires a lot more knowledge she said.

"I think sometimes after three years you just get up to speed with all the issues that are going on," said Veno. "When you stay, you feel you're more part of the process."

The last election also saw Stephanie Dodyk elected to council, but a family move to Lloydminster caused her to resign in July.

If Veno, Ryckman, and Davidson are re-elected, with the departure of Dodyk, and Deputy Mayor Brian Wittal's intention to run for mayor, two additional spots will be open.

The nomination deadline for the municipal election is Sept. 17.

Local soldiers home safe and sound

From six-month tour in Afghanistan to Central Alberta

BY KIM DICK
MVG Staff

It's a long way home from the southeastern region of Afghanistan, but two local soldiers are back - safe and sound.

Master Cpl. Scott MacFarlane, from Olds, and Cpl. Maury Gratrix, from Edmonton, have returned to their families back from a six-month tour of duty with the 3rd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry (PPCLI) based in Edmonton, AB.

The homecoming last week, for the soldiers and families was bittersweet; MacFarlane and Gratrix lost nine colleagues and friends on this tour of duty in one of the most dangerous provinces of the country.

Stationed in the Zhari and Panjwai districts of Khandahar province, members of their battalion were killed July 4 after completing Operation LUGER, a joint operation led by The Afghan National Security forces.

The attack occurred as the patrol returned to a nearby forward operating base when their RG-31 vehicle struck a suspected improvised explosive device (IED).

"Every day we lose a soldier it is a bad day for sure," said MacFarlane. "We lost quite a few soldiers on this tour and I lost friends from a regiment back east as well."

MacFarlane, who is originally from Halifax, Nova Scotia, was on his third tour of duty with the Canadian forces, his first for Afghanistan as he was stationed in Bosnia and Africa before.

Gratrix was on his first tour of duty with the Canadian forces.

It has been five years since the international forces entered Afghanistan and since then 69 Canadian soldiers and one diplomat have been killed.

Approximately 2,500 Canadian forces are stationed in the Zhari and Panjwai districts where Taliban insurgents have reportedly been weakened in strength and numbers.

"The threat is everywhere...there are IEDs, there are suicide borne IEDs, sometimes it is a big mine in the road or a car," said MacFarlane. "You are constantly looking around...you've got to be on the lookout for certain things and sometimes you see it and your alertness goes from high to higher."

MacFarlane says soldiers on tour in the region have to always be alert and watchful - even within the safety of the forward operating bases.

"I think you are in a mindset because when you are there and you are outside the wire, it's real," said MacFarlane. "I always used to tell my guys, when you step outside the wire, game on. Our mistakes cost lives."

"The core operating base is surrounded by wire and is manned all the way around the perimeter at all times, so you are relatively safe in there from enemy fire," said Gratrix. "Minus the mortars and rockets."

For now, the soldiers are off duty until Thanksgiving of this year - they have left the chaos and excruciating heat of the Afghanistan combat zone for family life - a focus both men are glad to come home to.

MacFarlane, his wife Tasha and their daughter Darion,

Carla Victor/Mountain View Publishing

Cpl. Maury Gratrix and Master Cpl. Scott MacFarlan sent this photo home to their wives while they were on a tour of duty in Afghanistan with the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry.

10, are close with the Gratrix family, as Maury married Tasha's sister Michelle.

Maury and Michelle have two children, Seth, 6, and Shayla, 2.

With their husbands in dangerous territory over the last six months the sisters said they would check in with each other all of the time.

"We would definitely touch base every day, have you heard anything," said Tasha. "That's the thing about us being sisters and our husbands over there, if one didn't hear from her husband usually the other one would so we would pass messages back and forth."

Keeping in touch with their families while serving in Afghanistan was not an easy feat and having that opportunity is a morale booster for the troops.

"We didn't have much access to the internet," said Gratrix. "We did have a satellite phone and we can phone home from time to time. You never pass up an opportunity."

"You feel so good after talking to your family...just to hear that little bit of home is a good thing," said MacFarlane. "They fought the war with us back home...kudos to our wives, it takes a special kind of woman to be the wife of a soldier."

While their husbands were stationed in a mud hut overseas, Tasha and Michelle have assumed the responsibilities of both mother and father to their children here at home.

Not only were they in charge of raising the kids and maintaining the household, the wives had the stress of knowing their husbands' lives were in danger.

"I found myself leaving messages on my phone whenever I would leave for the weekend," said Michelle. "We are not in, but if this is an emergency you can call me on this number...I will be there."

They talk about being glued to the television, hoping to catch a glimpse of their husbands, especially after the battalion lost six men on July 4.

"I sat there for like 24 hours watching every news channel, and checking the internet because maybe they caught something the news channel didn't," said Tasha. "Even when we know it's not our husbands it might have been our girlfriend's husband...because we are such a close-knit family it hurts no matter what."

Tasha, Michelle and the kids put together care packages to send to Afghanistan - it is one of the few ways to keep their husbands connected to the comforts of home.

"I sent gosh, well hand sanitizer was huge and baby wipes," said Michelle. "Stuff from home, like pictures of what the kids had drawn."

"We put little personal things in there too," said Tasha. "I made Scott a little scrapbook with different things Darion had done...and I never send anything without pictures of the dogs."

It's the little things that boosted morale when the soldiers were stationed in Afghanistan.

"On the home front, things like Red Fridays and all of the people showing support...we will get the news from back home on our forces television network," said MacFarlane. "It is really a boost when you see 5,000 people wearing red for you."

Now that the soldiers are back home, the families have found that morale boosts come in many different ways.

"We were out for pizza and a gentleman had overheard us talking and he came up and shook Maury's hand," said Michelle.

"Olds is very supportive," said MacFarlane. "Maury and I have been thanked so much since we have been home from total strangers."

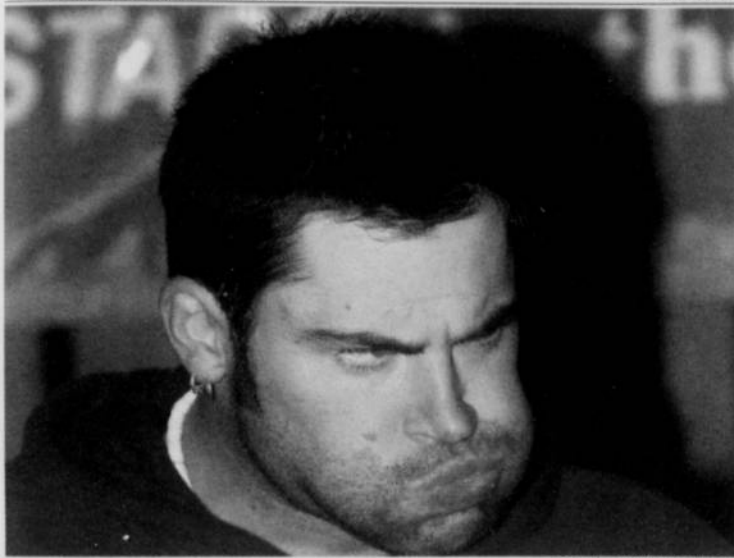

Both Scott and Maury are looking forward to their time off - each man thankful for the chance to reconnect with their wives and kids and reintegrate back into the day-to-day routines of their families.

Scott, Tasha and Darion are off to Nova Scotia to visit his parents while Maury, Michelle, Seth and Shayla are back to Edmonton with plans to fit a little camping in.

Home safe and sound - a world away from the trials and tribulations facing the next tour of soldiers in the heart of Afghanistan's conflict.

For Scott and Tasha, it was the support of the community of Olds that has become a part of the pride associated with his six-month tour of duty.

"It puts a human touch on what is going on over there...it's not just these faceless soldiers, people can put a face to the name and the guys on the news and realize they are married to their own community," said MacFarlane. "You don't necessarily have to support the cause but these are the guys you coached in hockey, or mowed your lawn...all across Canada there is not one province that isn't represented over there...Support your troops."

Coach pleased with Colts camp

BY JOSH SKAPIN
Didsbury Review

The Mountain View Colts coaching staff got their first look at what could be on their roster this season during the team's training camp at Carstairs arena Sept. 8 and 9.

Colts bench boss Cliff Murphy said 38 players hit the ice looking to win jobs over the weekend.

"It's been going pretty good," he said.

Of that group, 15 veterans, which means all but one qualifying returnee are looking to suit up again.

"(The veterans) did a very good job helping some of the young guys understand what it takes to play at this level," said Murphy.

Murphy said forward J.R. DeFoe had a rough time being hampered by injuries for much of last season, but appears poised for a comeback.

"He was absolutely flying out there," said Murphy of the Didsbury native.

He also noted Didsbury's Tyler Owen as an impressive candidate for roster spot.

"Every session he just got stronger and stronger,"

Murphy says there will be a list of cuts sometime this week, prior to exhibition games versus the Three Hills Thrashers and Stettler Lightning this weekend.

For the first two exhibition tilts Murphy says he will be experimenting with which players to use in what situation.

"I'll be like a mad scientist from the bench, just trying out different things to see what works," said Murphy.

During the first two exhibition games, four goaltenders, including veterans Evan Miller and Kris Jackson will be sharing ice time.

Murphy says with the look of his veterans and performance of two rookies, that the Colts should have one of the better goaltending tandems in the Heritage Junior B Hockey League this season.

The last two exhibition games will pit the Colts against Banff Academy, including one in Didsbury. Dates for these matches are yet to be determined.

The Colts will start their season on the road against the Red Deer Vipers Oct. 6.

Their home opener will face the Colts against the Claresholm Storm in Didsbury Oct. 13.

A walk down memory lane

Former grads and guests enjoy weekend festivities

BY JOSH SKAPIN
Didsbury Review

Over 300 people were on hand for the 2007 Homecoming at the Zion Evangelical Missionary Church in Didsbury Aug. 31 to Sept. 2.

The Century anniversary for the sandstone/brick building now housing the Didsbury and District Museum was celebrated with a reunion of former Didsbury High School (DHS) students, teachers and guests from the graduating classes of 1945 and 1957.

According to the Homecoming committee, the festivities were a success.

"We were very pleased with everything," said Irene Collinge, homecoming committee member and spouse to DHS alumnus Jack Collinge.

"We had a very good turnout to everything."

The weekend included a Didsbury Historical tour, which took participants to five different residences in town, which included the Hiebert home, the Liesemer home, the Bricker home, the Good home, and the old hospital.

"We were very pleased with everything,"

IRENE COLLINGE

"We had it arranged with homeowners so that four groups of 15 people would tour the homes," said committee member Sharon Israelson.

Israelson created a small information booklet giving a brief historical biography on each residence.

Also popular, were tours at the new DHS and old DHS.

"Everyone was pleased with the number of people who wanted to see all these things," said Irene.

Past and present residents also played a game where they were challenged to name which businesses operated where businesses presently exist.

"We had everyone write what they could remember in their time and how many and what they were from years back," said Irene.

"We will be giving that information to the town of Didsbury and that will go into the archives because of the knowledge that a lot of people don't know."

Irene said the majority of visitors were from Alberta, but there were long-distance visitors from as far away as Ottawa, Texas, Washington and South America.

Vehicle inspector beats North America's best Trombley named grand champion at Minnesota event

BY PAUL FREY
MVG Staff

James Trombley recently proved he is the best in his line of work, coming home to Olds as the Grand Champion at the North American Vehicle Inspection Championships held late last month.

Trombley beat out approximately 55 other contestants from throughout Canada, the United States and Mexico at the Minneapolis, Minnesota event held August 20 to 26. He got the chance to go to the championships after winning the provincial competition in June in Red Deer. Although Trombley has been conducting inspections for the commercial enforcement branch of Alberta Infrastructure and Transportation for the past 10 years, the provincial competition in June was his first.

"It was exciting, basically being around the best of the best. These are the best inspectors in North America.

"I was somewhat nervous at some times because I mean, yeah, these guys know their stuff," he said.

Trombley said he got excellent feedback from fellow competitors. One competitor, from the Indiana State Police, related his experiences of inspecting trucks.

"I learned lots, educational-wise and the ... bonds that you make ... was great," he said.

The competition was held in conjunction with the American Trucking Association's National Truck Driving Championships so Trombley also got to hear the other side of the story as well — from some who had been driving for up to 40 years.

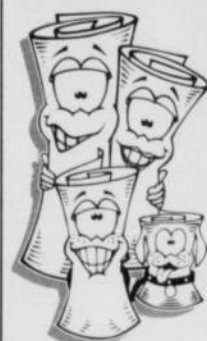

Next year, Trombley won't be able to compete at the championships — in Houston — but will be making a keynote address to all the contestants and then judging part of the competition.

The competition consisted of seven categories, including a standard level 1 inspection in which contestants had to find several violations on a commercial transport truck in the lowest amount of time. Another portion was finding violations on dangerous goods shipping documents and packages contained in a parcel delivery truck in the lowest amount of time.

"Some of the contestants were so close, where they found the exact same violations, (that) it came down to the time (to determine a winner)," he said.

There was also a three-day training component on inspection of buses, a new exhaust system now being developed for commercial trucks and a variety of other topics.

Carstairs RCMP detachment suggested

Didsbury Sgt. says prepare for growth

BY JOANNA THOMSON
Courier Staff

Increases in crime in Carstairs may signal the beginning of growing pains for the burgeoning community.

Reports of stolen vehicles, burgle and entering, theft and assaults coming from the mostly unpatrolled town are concerning RCMP in Didsbury, who say Carstairs may need their own detachment if the number of residents, and crime continue to climb.

"With growth projections indicating a population of 5,000 in just two years, we would like to see at least five officers permanently stationed in Carstairs," said Sgt. Kevin O'Dwyer in a protective services meeting at the town's administrative building Sept. 5.

However, O'Dwyer commented that it would take at least a few years for a request to go through - leaving Carstairs residents to rely on officers from outside detachments to respond to calls.

And while the nearby station has been able to service both communities in the past, RCMP officers are now saying that mounting problems in Carstairs and other outlying areas are putting more pressure on an already stressed force.

"We have only ten officers - six of whom have less than two years experience," says O'Dwyer. "Most of them are so busy responding to calls that they barely have enough time to write their reports."

In fact, numbers show that the majority of calls attended by the unit over the year are from outside of Didsbury.

"We've been getting a lot of calls from within Carstairs - many of them serious violations"

KEVIN O'DWYER

"We've been getting a lot of calls from within Carstairs - many of them serious violations," O'Dwyer commented.

In the last few weeks alone officers have responded to several complaints involving stolen vehicles, attempted theft and vehicles being broken into with contents stolen.

"We've witnessed a recent rash of vehicle thefts in the Carriage Lane area of Carstairs and they seem to be targeting the Ford F-350s. We just want people to be aware of that and to take the proper precautions," he says. "Don't leave anything of value in your vehicle and don't leave it unlocked."

O'Dwyer is not sure why Carstairs - still a small community - is experiencing these problems.

"We've been seeing this type of crime over the last few years and for some reason, Carstairs is being targeted."

However, vehicle theft is not the only complaint from residents. A statistics report prepared by the mayor, Lance Colby, shows a number of serious violations plaguing the community from April to July of this year.

Those include:

- 10 assaults, 3 with weapon or causing bodily harm
- 4 threats, including criminal harassment
- 7 thefts of property under $5000
- 5 thefts under $5000 from a motor vehicle
- 1 theft over $5000
- 5 break and enters - businesses
- 1 arson report

CLC revisions due to escalating costs

BY PAUL FREY
Olds Albertan

Inflation has pushed construction costs of the Community Learning Campus to nearly $65 million, but Olds College is working with a variety of partners to help bring in additional funding.

The project's budget is currently under review, with the CLC hoping to hear back this week from the Ministry of Advanced Education and the Town of Olds. Advanced Education had indicated it would up its funding to $29 million from $20 million and the town would increase its contribution to $1 million from $300,000.

"In the case of the town ... we will be meeting with the town to understand how they'd like those funds used. We're extremely appreciative of the support from both the government and the town," said Stewart McNabb, vice-president of Olds College, following a presentation to Chinook's Edge School Division trustees last week.

Both Dot Negropontes, executive director of the CLC and MacNabb told board members that because of escalating costs, the project has had to be revised.

"In the case of the town ... we will be meeting with the town to understand how they'd like those funds used."

STEWART MACNABB
vice-president, Olds College

most of all the space, Negropontes said. By reducing the floor area of the buildings (mostly in hallway space), construction and maintenance costs will be much less.

Negropontes stressed, however, that programs will not be affected by making more efficient use of space.

"We're very pleased with the project and things are moving along very quickly," Negropontes said, adding that the eLearning Centre blends well with the library and alumni centre. "You can hardly tell where the old building ends and the new building begins."

Painters were to be arriving to paint the interior of the eLearning centre last week. Steel is also going up for the fine arts building.

The school division's bus maintenance facility is now complete.

The first bus rolled out of the facility on August 29.

The Bell eLearning Centre is scheduled to be completed later this fall and the fine arts and multimedia centre next fall. The core high school and Health and Wellness Centre are due to be completed in the fall of 2009.

HUGHES, DAVID OCTOBER 6, 1911 - AUGUST 29, 2007

David Hughes, beloved father, brother and uncle passed away at the Didsbury Hospital on August 29, 2007 at the age of 95 years. He immigrated from Wales in 1925 with his parents, two brothers and two sisters to the Lone Pine area east of Didsbury. Following her schooling at Siebertville school, he worked for local farmers which included threshing crews for Ahlgrim's, renting land from Sid Bouch and driving "CAT" for McCulloch's. During the early 1930s, Dave worked at the Bar U Ranch south of Longview providing him life long interest in the site. He commenced working for Regent Drilling in the early 1950s and over a thirty year span, worked from Pincher Creek in Southern Alberta, to the Didsbury/Sundre area, to Northern Alberta, North West Territories and the Arctic. In his position as Driller, he received 7 perfect years of safety awards between 1962 - 1968 from the Canadian Association of Oilwell Drilling Contractors for successfully supervising a drilling rig without a lost time accident to himself or any crew members. He was married to Julie in 1952 and maintained his marital home in Edmonton for over 50 years. On his retirement at the age of 71 years, he visited his birthplace in Wales, enjoyed his longtime oilmen friendship in Edmonton and visited family at Edson, Stettler and Didsbury / Carstairs. Following his recovery from a serious stroke, he moved into Carstairs Chinook Winds Lodge in May 2004 where he thrived from lots of attention and visits from his extended family, friends and the Lodge staff. In particular, he really appreciated the Lodge's delicious home cooked meals. Dave leaves to mourn, his son, Dave Jr. of Edmonton; his sisters, Myra Underhay, Gwyneth Pratt and Olwen (Frank) Bray; sister-in-law Doris Hughes, special nephew: Doug Hughes and many other nieces, nephews and friends. 110. In Memoriam

110. In Memoriam

Some people are fortunate to have a person in their lives that stands out amongst all others. A person who is extremely special, who kind of knows how we feel & even how we may be thinking, who is happy for us at all times. A person who is there to talk to, who cares selflessly & who is always truthful. When this person leaves, our lives are not the same.

One year has passed since that sad day,
When the one we loved was called away.
God took him home, it was his will,
Within our hearts, he lives still.

Loving & kind in all his ways,
Upright & true to the end of his days.
Sincere & kind in heart & mind,
What a beautiful memory he left behind.

More & more each day we miss him.
Be with him Lord in your keeping.
Until we all reach your golden shore,
Then we'll love him again like we did before.

In loving memory our our father Wesley E. Papke who passed away on September 13, 2006.

~ from all of his children, we miss you Dad ~
